

Transatlantic Seminar for Museum Curators and Educators – Washington D.C., November 4-7, 2019

The Smithsonian Institution, Germany's Leibniz Association, and Fulbright Germany are pleased to announce that applications are now being accepted for a new Transatlantic Seminar for Museum Curators and Educators: "Museums as Spaces for Social Discourse and Learning."

WHEN: November 4-7, 2019

WHERE: Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC

WHO: Open to 12 German and 12 American curators, educators, and other professionals working in museums or similar institutions, such as memorial sites.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION:

The four-day seminar will bring participants together to explore museums as spaces for social discourse and learning. The seminar will aim to deepen international understanding, while simultaneously supporting hands-on professional development, exchange of best practices, and lasting professional connections. Topics covered will include:

- Exhibitions and public programming;
- Diversity, equity, accessibility, and inclusion;
- Collaboration across disciplines and sectors;
- National mission in a globalized world.

Participants will be expected to discuss and share their experiences through active participation.

HOW TO APPLY:

Please see the following link to the Seminar Application and further information about the program:
