HISTORY

Albert Askenazi's first Don Quixote art piece was given to him in Mexico City in 1971, after he presented an inspiring review of Cervantes' famous book. Throughout their world travels, Albert and his wife, Shirleen, searched and acquired art, books, figurines, and unique items that depicted the book's characters. Over the years, as the Don Quixote collection grew, they were asked to showcase it locally, nationally, and internationally. It has been displayed in public and private venues, including universities, libraries, clubs, galleries, and museums.

ABOUT ALBERT AND SHIRLEEN ASKENAZI

Born in Durango, Mexico, Albert met his wife, Shirleen, in New York City. Their romance blossomed quickly and they were married in El Paso, Texas in 1965. They have four children (Sam, Morris, David and Danny) and twelve grandchildren. They raised their sons with many of the values that were highlighted in the book, i.e., battling social injustice, dreaming to do the impossible, and visionary action. Their passion for the collection is evident in their home where they showcase many of the collection's finest pieces.

What Can Your Organization Do With This Collection?

Museo Don Quixote is looking to partner with non-profit or for-profit organizations. The partnership would allow the organization to display items in accordance to the mission and vision of the Museo Don Quixote and the partner organization. Museo Don Quixote will also consider selling the entire collection. Buyers who have the intention to display the museum to the public are preferred, but private collectors will be considered.
