

American
Alliance of Museums

Museum Studies Network

Thinking about summer internships?

Together with the NYC Museum Educators Roundtable, the Museum Studies Network has produced a survey and crowdsourced spreadsheet to share remote internship opportunities for emerging museum professionals looking to pursue Summer 2020 internships.

While many institutions remain physically closed and have moved operations online, they still are in need of summer interns for this upcoming summer. We are collecting opportunities to connect these institutions with interested applicants and vice versa.

Don't have an online internship planned, but looking to learn more about moving your internship opportunities online? Please fill out the form so that we can be in touch with more information.

If you are a museum with a remote internship opportunity or interest in learning more about hosting remote interns, please fill out this survey: <https://forms.gle/8Njyj975E4mx3qci9>

If you are a student seeking a remote internship, please review: <https://bit.ly/34M6IAV>

DISCLAIMER: the American Alliance of Museums, the AAM Museum Studies Network, and NYCMER have not vetted or endorsed the internships listed in this document and have solely created this as a tool to collect information for museum studies students to easily find digital internship opportunities during the COVID-19 pandemic. Students interested in these opportunities should consult their university's internship credit policies and follow their institution's guidelines. Students should direct questions about specific remote internships to the institutions offering them.

April 14, 2020